FEATLY. adv. [from feat.] Neatly; nimbly; dexterously.
Foot it featly here and there, Shakesp. Tempest.
And sweet sprites the burthen bear.
The moon was up, and shot a gleamy light;
He saw a quire of ladies in a round, Dryden.
That featly footing seem'd to skim the ground.
There haply by the ruddy damsel seen, Tickell.
Or shepherd-boy, they featly foot the green.
FEATNESS. n. s. [from feat.] Neatness; nicety; dexterity.
FEATURE. n. s. [feiture, old French.]
1. The cast or make of the face.
Report the feature of Octavia, her years. Shakesp.
2. Any lineament or single part of the face.
Though ye be the fairest of God's creatures,
Yet think that death shall spoil your goodly features. Spenser.
We may compare the face of a great man with the character, and try if we can find out in his looks and features the haughty, cruel, or unmerciful temper that discovers itself in the history. Addison on ancient Medals.
Though various features did the sisters grace,
A sister's likeness was in every face. Addison's Ovid's Met.
TO FEATURE. v. a. To resemble in countenance; to favour.
He liv'd in court most prais'd, most lov'd, lific. Diät.

FECUNDITY. n. s. [from fecund; fecundité, French.]
1. Fruitfulness; quality of producing or bringing forth in great abundance.
I appeal to the animal and vegetable productions of the earth, the vast numbers whereof notoriously testify the extreme luxuriance and fecundity of it. Woodward's Nat. Hist.
2. Power of producing or bringing forth.
Some of the ancients mention some seeds that retain their fecundity forty years; and I have found, from a friend, that melon-seeds, after thirty years, are best for raising of melons.
Ray on the Creation.
He could never create so ample a world, but he could have made a bigger; and the fecundity of his creative power never growing barren, nor being exhausted. Bentley's Sermons.
FED. Preterite and participle pass. of To feed.
For on the grassy verdure as he lay,
And breath'd the freshness of the early day,
Devouring dogs the helpless infant tore,
Fed on his trembling limbs, and lapp'd the gore. Pope.
FE'DARY. n. s. [fedus, Latin, or from feudum.] This word, peculiar to Shakspere, may signify either a confederate; a partner; or a dependant.
Damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee, senseless bauble!
Art thou a fedary for this act, and lookest
So virgin-like without? Shakspere's Cymbeline.
FEDERAL. adj. [from fedus, Latin.] Relating to a league or contract.
It is a federal rite betwixt God and us, as eating and drinking, both among the Jews and Heathens, was wont to be.
Hammond's Fundamentals.
The Romans compelled them, contrary to all federal right and justice, both to part with Sardinia, their lawful territory, and also to pay them for the future a double tribute. Grew.

confederacy.
FEE. n. s. [feoh, Saxon; fee, Danish, cattle; feudum, low Latin; feu, Scottish.]
1. [In law.] All lands and tenements that are held by any acknowledge of superiority to a higher lord. All lands and tenements, wherein a man hath a perpetual estate to him and his heirs, &c. are divided into allodium and feudum: allodium is every man's own land, which he possesses merely in his own right, without acknowledgment of any service, or payment of any rent to any other. Feudum, or fee, is that which we hold by the benefit of another, and in name whereof we owe services, or pay rent, or both, to a superior lord. And all our land in England, the crown-land, which is in the king's own hands, in right of his crown, excepted, is in the nature of feudum: for though a man have land by descent from his ancestors, or bought it for his money; yet is the land of such a nature, that it cannot come to any, either by descent or purchase, but with the burthen that was laid upon him who had novel fee, or first of all received it as a benefit from his lord, to him and to all such to whom it might descend, or be

FEE

- be any way conveyed from him. So that no man in England has directum dominium, that is, the very property or demesne in any land, but the prince in right of his crown: for though he that has fee has jus perpetuum et utile dominium, yet he owes a duty for it, and therefore it is not simply his own.
Fee is divided into two sorts; fee-absolute, otherwise called fee-simple, and fee-conditional, otherwise termed fee-tail:
fee-simple is that whereof we are seized in those general words,
To us and our heirs for ever: fee-tail is that whereof we are seized to us and our heirs, with limitation; that is, the heirs of our body, &c. And fee-tail is either general or special: general is where land is given to a man, and the heirs of his body: fee-tail special is that where a man and his wife are seized of land to them and the heirs of their two bodies. Cowel.
Now like a lawyer, when he land would let,
Or fell fee-simples in his master's name. Hubbard's Tale.
Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a fray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Shakspere's Henry VI.
2. Property; peculiar.
What concern they?
The general cause; or is it a fee-grief,
Due to some single breaff? Shakspere's Macbeth.
3. Reward; gratification; recompense.
These be the ways by which, without reward,
Livings in courts be gotten, though full hard;
For nothing there is done without a fee. Hubbard's Tale.
Not helping, death's my fee;
But if I help, what do you promise me? Shakspere.
4. Payments occasionally claimed by persons in office.
Now that God and friends
Have turn'd my captive state to liberty,
At our enlargement what are thy due fees? Shak. Hen. VI.
5. Reward paid to physicians or lawyers.
He does not reject the person's pretensions, who does not know how to explain them; or refuse doing a good office for a man, because he cannot pay the fee of it. Addison's Spectat.
6. Portion; pittance; share. Obsolete.
In pruning and trimming all manner of trees,
Reserve to each cattle their property fees. Tull's Husbandry.
FE'FARM. n. s. [fee and farm.] Tenure by which lands are held from a superior lord.
John surrendered his kingdoms to the pope, and took them back again, to hold in feefarm; which brought him into such hated, as all his lifetime after he was possess'd with fear. Davies.
TO FEE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To reward; to pay.
No man fees the sun, no man purchases the light, nor errs if he walks by it. South's Sermons.
Watch the disease in time; for when within
The dropsy rages and extends the skin,
In vain for hellebore the patient cries,
And fees the doctor; but too late is wife. Dryden's Persf.
2. To bribe.
I have long loved her, and ingrossed opportunities to meet her; feed every slight occasion, that could but niggardly give me fight of her. Shaksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.
3. To keep in hire.
There's not a thane of them but in his house
I have a servant fee'd. Shakspere's Macbeth.
FE'BLE. adj. [foible, French.] Weak; debilitated; sickly;
infirm; without strength of body or mind.
The men carried all the feeble upon asses to Jericho. 2 Chron.
Command th' assistance of a faithful friend,
But feeble are the succours I can send. Dryden's En.
How I have lov'd, excuse my faltering tongue;
My spirits feeble, and my pains are strong. Dryden.
We carry the image of God in us, a rational and immortal soul; and though we be now miserable and feeble, yet we aspire after eternal happiness, and finally expect a great exaltation of all our natural powers. Bentley's Sermons.
A crutch that helps the weak along,
Supports the feeble, but retards the strong. Smith.
TO FE'BLE. v. a. [from the noun.] To weaken; to enfeeble; to deprive of strength or power. Not in use.
Or as a cattle reared high and round,
By subtle engines and malicious flight
Is undermined from the lowest ground,
And her foundation forc'd and feebled quite. Fairy Queen.
Shall that victorious hand be feebled here?
That in your chambers gave you chastisement? Sh. K. John.
FE'BLE-MINDED. adj. [foible and mind.] Weak of mind;
defective in resolution and constancy.
Warn them that are unruly, comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak, be patient toward all men. 1 Thess. v. 14.
FE'BLNESS. n. s. [from feeble.] Weakness; imbecility; infirmity; want of strength.
A better head Rome's glorious body fits,
Than his that shakes for age and febleness. Shak. Tit. Andr.
Some in their latter years, through the febleness of their limbs, have been forced to study upon their knees. South.
FE'BLV. ad. v. [from feeble.] Weakly; without strength.

FEE

- Like mine, thy gentle numbers feebly creep;
Thy tragick muse gives smiles, thy comick sleep. Dryden.
TO FEED. v. a. [fedam, Gothick; pegan, roegan, Saxon.]
1. To supply with food.
Her heart and bowels through her back he drew,
And fed the hounds that help'd him to pursue. Dryden.

time it eat more than its own weight. Arbutnot on Diet.
2. To supply; to furnish.
A constant smoke arises from the warm springs that feed the many baths with which this island is stocked. Addison.
The breadth of the bottom of the hopper must be half the length of a barleycorn, and near as long as the rollers, that it may not feed them too fast. Mortimer's Husbandry.
3. To graze; to consume by cattle.
Once in three years feed your mowing lands, if you cannot get manure constantly to keep them in heart. Mortimer.
The froit will spoil the grafs; for which reason take care to feed it close before Winter. Mortimer's Husbandry.
4. To nourish; to cherish.
How oft from pomp and state did I remove,
To feed despair, and cherish hopeless love? Prior.
5. To keep in hope or expectation.
Barbarossa learned the strength of the emperor, craftily feeding him with the hope of liberty. Kneller's Hist. of the Turks.
6. To delight; to entertain; to keep from satiety.
The alteration of scenes, so it be without noise, feeds and relieves the eye, before it be full of the same object. Bacon.
TO FEED. v. n.
1. To take food. Chiefly applied to animals food.
To feed were best at home;
From thence the sawce to meat is ceremony;
Meeting were bare without it. Shakspere's Macbeth.
2. To prey; to live by eating.
I am not covetous of gold;
Nor care I, who doth feed upon my cost. Shaksp. Hen. V.
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another. Shaksp. Coriolanus.
Galen speaketh of the curing of the scirrhus of the liver by milk of a cow, that feedeth upon certain herbs. Bacon.
Some birds feed upon the berries of this vegetable. Brown.
He feeds on fruits, which, of their own accord,
The willing grounds and laden trees afford. Dryden's Virg.
The Brachmans were all of the same race, lived in fields and woods, and fed only upon rice, milk, or herbs. Temple.
All feed on one vain patron, and enjoy
Th' extensive blessing of his luxury. Pope's Essay on Man.
3. To pasture; to place cattle to feed.
If a man shall cause a field to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field, he shall make restitution. Ex. xxii. 5.
4. To grow fat or plump.
FEED. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Food; that which is eaten.
A fearful deer then looks most about when he comes to the best feed, with a shivering kind of tremor through all her principal parts. Sidney, b. ii.
An old worked ox eats as well as a young one: their feed is much cheaper, because they eat no oats. Mortimer's Husbandry.

Not to his master's but his feeder's hand. Denham.
2. An exciter; an encourager.
When thou do'st hear I am as I have been,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,
The tutor and the feeder of my riots. Shaksp. Henry IV.
3. One that eats.
With eager feeding, food doth choke the feeder. Shaksp.
We meet in Aristotle with one kind of thrush, called the miffel-thrush, or feeder upon miffeltoo. Brown's Vulgar Err.
4. One that eats nicely; one that lives luxuriously.
But that our feasts
In every mess have folly, and the feeders
Jest with it as a custom, I should blush
To see you so attired. Shakspere's Winter's Tale.
But such fine feeders are no guests for me;
Riot agrees not with frugality:
Then, that unfashionable man am I,
With me they'd strive for want of ivory. Dryden's Juven.
TO FEEL. pret. felt; part pass. felt. v. n. [felan, Saxon.]
1. To have perception of things by the touch.
The sense of feeling can give us a notion of extension, shape, and all other ideas that enter at the eye, except colours. Addison's Spectator, N^o. 411.
2. To search by feeling. See FEELER.
3. To have a quick sensibility of good or evil, right or wrong.
Man, who feels for all mankind. Pope.
4. To
